Professing: An inspiring novel of hope in the Voyages of Angels series Donald A Carpenter

Drunk and desperate, reporter Ward Reid is given one last chance by his newspaper editor to redeem himself. Chasing a fluff feature article on an Alaskan cruise ship, 28-year-old recently-dumped Ward finds himself surrounded by couples in love. One particular retirement-aged couple captivates Ward to the point of demanding the Professor relate the story of how he and Teddie found their happiness together. As the Professor cruises through his tragedy-laced life, Ward discovers that his own life is salvageable. The question is whether he can apply the Professor's lessons. Love, betrayal, death, depression, abuse, money, hot women, booze, past lives, secrets of inner peace are all part of the voyages of angels. Bet you think angels are pure. They don't all start that way. "Professing flows and captures the readers attention in a way that makes you feel you are "in" the story. It appeals to the spiritual reader and to the reader who loves a love story." Libby Smith Ed.D., Ph.D., C.L., Wind Horse Wellness "Professing touched my heart and soul. I can hardly wait to read the next book in the series." Denise R. McGinnis, Ph.D., Stephen Minister Follow Ward's continuing adventures and lessons in the next novels in the Voyages of Angels series, "Who the Heck is Beth?" and "Crises Notepad."
