This tale of man against nature is a classic example of American realism that was popular during the early- and mid-1900s. An aging Cuban fisherman has fallen on hard times with no success of late. Even his apprentice has left to join a more prosperous boat. In desperation, he goes farther out to sea and lands a large marlin. He struggles with the fish for three days before finally killing it. Unable to pull it into the boat, he must drag it along in the water as he heads home. The bloodied fish attracts sharks, and despite his best efforts to keep them at bay, he is left with only the skeletal remains of the marlin by the time he reaches the shore. Exhausted, he drops into a deep sleep. Yet the adventure has changed both the man and the community's view of him. The next morning, the apprentice returns and suggests that they go fishing together. The novel by Ernest Hemingway is sold separately. The study guide and the novel are appropriate for a credited course in American or World literature. The CD Version contains the same material as the original booklets. This version allows you to view the pages on a computer screen or print off as many copies as you need for your household. It is the same price as the booklet, with less storage hassles. The CD contains PDF files that can be opened by an Adobe Acrobat reader and can be used with both PCs and Macs. However, as with any CD format, once the seal has been broken and the product opened, it CANNOT BE RETURNED. For grade 9-12.
